CONFERENCE INFORMATION

Registration is in the Pavilion Landing of the Hyatt Regency Albuquerque and is open Thursday and Friday 7:30 AM to 6:00 PM, and Saturday 7:30 AM to 2:00 PM.

Book Exhibit is in the second-floor Atrium of the Hyatt Regency Albuquerque and is open Thursday through Saturday, 8:00 AM to 6:00 PM.

Exhibitors:

The University of Pennsylvania Press (est. 1890) publishes meritorious scholarly and educational works. The Press also publishes eighteen peer-reviewed academic journals, mostly in the humanities, and the magazine Dissent.

The Scholar's Choice brings books to readers worldwide through exhibits at academic conferences. We display titles from a variety of university and academic publishers and all books will be available for sale and/or order to conference attendees, individual buyers, and library buyers.

Oxford University Press is the largest university press in the world, publishing in 70 languages and 190 countries. Find out how we make the highest-quality academic and professional content available around the globe.

Early American Reprints, housed in the Department of English at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, intends to produce works of the period to about 1830 in short runs of only a few hundred copies at a time.

The University of North Carolina Press advances the research, teaching, and public service missions of a great public university by publishing excellent work from leading scholars, writers, and intellectuals and by presenting that work to both academic audiences and general readers.

Clemson University Press is pleased to announce the creation of a new book series on African American Literature to be coedited by Rhondda Robinson Thomas (Clemson University) and Valerie Babb (Emory University). Engaging with the full range of the African American literary tradition, from the Age of Exploration to the present, this series is the first from a university press to be devoted to African American literature and culture.

Readex publishes historical primary source collections for teaching and research. Many of these digital resources are essential for the study of 19th-century America, including Early American Newspapers, Series 1- 14; The American Slavery Collection; The American Civil War Collection; American Pamphlets; Nineteenth-Century American Drama; American Broad­sides and Ephemera; and many others.

WELCOME LETTER

We are delighted that you have joined us in Albuquerque, New Mexico, for the fifth biennial meeting of C19: The Society of Nineteenth-Century Americanists. Albuquerque provides the ideal location to discuss environmental and geographic contrasts as we gather around the theme "Climate." A mile high in elevation and at the northernmost tip of the Sonoran desert, Albuquerque sprawls in the Rio Grande basin, flanked on one side by the Sandia mountains and on the other by the West Mesa. Through the center flows the Rio Grande, a so-called "exotic" river (like the Nile) because it cuts through a desert, trickling south through Las Cruces and El Paso, where, since the 1848 Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, it's been mapped, moved, militarized, navigated, and crossed as an ostensible natural border between the United States and Mexico.

Albuquerque is also a study of climate contrasts, for while renowned for its inviting weather, it has also been a site of violent historical contact, conflict, and competing colonialities that remain palpable in everything from the city's layout to its uneven economic development. It is a city that continues to spread and grow well beyond the capacity of its natural aquifer, and despite the abundant sunshine, the region continues to rely on fuels from fossil, fracking, and fission rather than catching rays or harnessing the winds of change.

The Program

As you will see from the range of panel presentations, the conference theme of "climate" has elicited a rich and varied response. From poetry to prose, fiction to nonfiction, the canonical to recent archival discoveries, the conference theme has proven to be capacious, reflecting the diverse interests and approaches of our members. There are panels that focus on ecological approaches either directed outward toward the environment or inward concerning the psyche, while others examine the contours of racial and queer climates. There are panels that explore the sensory undertones of climate including its acoustical meaning, and others that make temporal comparisons with Hollywood's Golden Age as well as to today. Climate, a term historically associated with time, is also discussed as a hemispheric practice that invites us to think beyond the linguistic borders of English, while others turn to the concept's regional inflections. This brief description merely scratches the surface of a substantial and diverse conference program.

Besides an expanded schedule of panels, we have also increased the number of seminars to nine. The interest in participating in Seminars continues to grow from graduate students to senior faculty and we are pleased to be offering an extensive range of topics from In/Civility and Keywords in the Environmental Humanities, to Performing Citizenship and Pacific Intersections. One of the seminars includes a writing workshop hosted by the editors of Avidly for those interested in writing for a wider audience. Seminars this year also explore the archive of Afro-Latinx writing, forms of indigenous textualities, and the teleologies of childhood. A seminar on the West and feminist critical regionalism speaks, in part, to our conference location in the Southwest. As a note, only those participants who applied to the seminar and were accepted can attend; auditors are not permitted in the Seminars. On behalf of the Program Committee, we would like to thank the seminar leaders for generously agreeing to facilitate the discussions.

Acknowledgments

The fifth biennial conference, our largest yet, has been made possible by the tremendous work of the Executive Committee and the Site Coordinators. Program Chair Carrie Tirado Bramen and committee members Alex Black and Martha Schoolman have assembled a superb schedule of panels and seminars. Vice President Meredith McGill conceived of our new addition to the conference: C19 Now!, a plenary session that will feature contemporary writers, activists, and artists in conversation about the present-day resonance of nineteenth-century issues. We are honored to inaugurate C19 Now! with an evening with Jenni Monet, a journalist and writer on indigenous peoples who has been embedded at Standing Rock. Communications Chair Claudia Stokes and her committee have been lively, responsive, and nimble, giving a fresh jolt to our social media presence. Jeff Insko, the C19 Membership Chair, continues to guide us as we seek to diversify and expand the society, while being mindful of the economic challenges of our present moment. Pat Crain, Member at Large, has worked to bring much-needed conversations about so-called “Alt-Ac” careers and about emeritus faculty to the conference. The conference’s new Mentorship Breakfast was the wonderful suggestion of Member at Large Barbara McCaskill. C19 has been very lucky to have Jesse Alemán coordinating the conference in Albuquerque with the terrific support of Lauren Perry. We are grateful to them and to the University of New Mexico for hosting our fifth conference so graciously and thoughtfully.

The continued success of C19 is made possible by our members, whose brilliance and intellectual generosity animate the society and the field. We are very proud to have introduced this past year two important new initiatives: the C19 Podcast and the C19 Travel Fund. Christine “Xine” Yao and her sharp, talented Podcast Subcommittee have produced a sparkling series of episodes on a variety of topics to date. They make for fascinating listening and help to bring C19 insight to a broader audience. Tune in to the Podcast on iTunes or SoundCloud, and come talk to Xine and the team about your podcast ideas during their drop-in hours during the “Climate” conference.

Increased accessibility to C19 on another front has been provided by the Travel Fund, which Dana Luciano spearheaded. We are grateful to Dana for the initiative, and to her selection committee—Martha Schoolman, Rodrigo Lazo, Munia Bhaumik, and Jeffrey Insko—for their assistance. The C19 Advisory Board and a number of member donors made it possible to provide nine grants to graduate students, contingent faculty, and others with limited access to travel funds, three times as many awards as we had initially hoped. We welcome further donations at our Fundly page for the 2020 conference. Congratulations to inaugural Travel Fund recipients Lubna Alzaroo, Ayendy Bonifacio, Sarah Buchmeier, Nicolette Gable, Manuel Herrero-Puertas, T. J. Robinson, Patricia Catherine Simpkins, Spencer Tricker, and Jessica Horvath Williams.

Paul Chase at Penn Press and Susan Forgit of the American Antiquarian Society manage C19’s membership and finances with care and efficiency; we would be lost without them. We owe a special debt to Paul Erickson of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, whose volunteer work on behalf of C19’s financial integrity sustains us. We thank Kristin Barry Brown for designing our conference imagery.

We welcome new J19: The Journal of Nineteenth-Century Studies editors Elizabeth Duquette and Stacey Margolis, and salute the founding editorial genius of Christopher Castiglia and Dana Nelson. Betsy and Stacey will be holding drop-in “office hours” in Albuquerque, and invite your questions and pitches.

A number of institutions have provided generous assistance to the conference. The Program Committee’s work was made possible by the University at Buffalo’s English Department, which enabled the committee to convene in Buffalo to select the conference program. The University of New Mexico’s English Graduate Student Association has contributed to the Scholars of Color Reception, with our gratitude. We thank the Penn State Center for American Literary Studies and the Oakland University English Department, College of Arts and Sciences, and the American Studies Concentration for sponsoring the Mentoring Breakfast. New York University’s English Department has made possible the special panel “‘Alt-Ac’: Humanities Careers Beyond the Academy,” organized by Pat Crain. The Penn State English Department has supported the Journal Editors special panel, and we thank Carolyn Sorisio for coordinating this event. Kristen Barry Brown designed our beautiful conference images. The reception following Jenni Monet’s C19 Now! plenary talk will feature musical installations courtesy of the Robb Musical Trust, and C19 access to the art exhibition “Meridel Rubenstein, Eden Turned on Its Side,” curated and introduced by Shawn Michelle Smith.

The biennial Business Meeting at the conference has been generative of many new initiatives and ideas. All C19 members are welcome to attend the Business Meeting; the agenda is posted on our website. While you are at the conference, please visit the book exhibitors in the Atrium. And if your travels bring you to Albuquerque on Wednesday, March 21, we warmly invite you to a pre-conference reception and dance performance at the Indian Pueblo Cultural Center.

Our deepest gratitude is to all of you for creating a climate of scholarly and pedagogic brilliance and intellectual generosity.
