

Dreaming Different Worlds: Reading Short Speculative Fiction

8 week course, Instructor: Lisa D. Chavez
English 387:001 57293 T/R 11-1:30 Remote Scheduled

Speculative fiction is an umbrella term for types of fiction that speculate on what might be.

This kind of writing is based in speculation about the future: (science fiction) or the past (alternate history) to dreams of other worlds and times: (fantasy), or works that fall somewhere in between: magical realism and slipstream. In this 8-week class, we'll read a variety of examples of short fiction being published now, and we'll also examine the differences and similarities between the disparate works that fall into the category of speculative fiction.

Full course description online: T: Dreaming Different Worlds - 57293 - ENGL 387 - 001